

PRESS RELEASE

Ministers from Britain’s wildlife hotspots meet on the 27th and 28th April to plan for the future post-Brexit

Representatives from 11 UK Overseas Territories (UKOT) and Crown Dependencies from as far afield as Bermuda, Pitcairn and the British Virgin Islands will be travelling to the Channel Island of Alderney on Thursday 27th and Friday 28th April to discuss the future of the environment in their jurisdictions. The meeting will tackle a diverse range of issues including the potential impacts of Brexit and the subsequent changes to UK laws, through to climate change and the need to share the limited resources available to these often isolated territories. The event has been co-ordinated by the non-governmental organisation the UK Overseas Territories Conservation Forum (UKOTCF) and is being hosted by the Government of Alderney, one of the smallest of the UK’s Crown Dependencies and the delegates will be formally greeted by the Island’s president Stuart Trought.

The UKOTs and Crown Dependencies all have their own identity and governing structure, with no representation in the UK Parliament; however they all form part of the nation-state of the UK. The exact relationship between the Overseas Territories and the UK differs for each, though the UK is generally responsible for defence, international relations including international conventions and also reserve powers in respect to their legislation. Combined, the UKOTs and Crown Dependencies are home to a far greater concentration of endemic (found nowhere else) and endangered species than any other part of the UK, with a 2016 paper estimating they might contain as many as 100,000 native species, of which 300 might be endemic species restricted to a single location*.

The UKOTs and Crown Dependencies Environment Ministers will be joined by Dr. John Kittmer, Director of Overseas Territories in the Foreign & Commonwealth Office. This is only the second meeting of its kind, the first having been hosted by the Government of Gibraltar in 2015. The aim of the meeting is to develop the benefits of joint and collaborative working, and discuss common priorities and approaches to negotiations with the UK Government.

The meeting will be jointly chaired by Victor Brownlees, Alderney’s Chief Executive, and John Cortés, Minister for the Environment of Gibraltar. The meeting has been made possible by the work of the UKOTCF, a UK-based NGO dedicated to ensuring conservation across these far-flung jurisdictions.

Alderney, a community of just 1900 residents, offered to host the meeting in recognition of the need to improve communication between the UK’s remote outlying communities. The island will play host to the ministers and their staff at its ‘Island Hall’ and will be laying on an informal dinner in the grounds of a Roman Fort known as the Nunnery which sits on the Island’s South Eastern coast, looking out towards France just eight miles away. The event is being co-ordinated on island by the Alderney Wildlife Trust, the 47th member of the British Wildlife Trust partnership.

Victor Brownlees (Alderney’s CEO) said of the importance of the meeting “We are delighted to welcome our friends and colleagues from the UK Overseas Territories and fellow Crown Dependencies. That Alderney is the host of such a high level meeting is a measure of the importance we as a community attach to preserving our distinct and special island home. I look forward to sharing experiences and learning how we can work even more closely together across the Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies in preserving and celebrating our distinct environmental heritages.”

Dr Mike Pienkowski, Chair UKOTCF commented ‘UKOTCF is the only body solely concerned with conservation and environmentally sustainable use across all UK’s Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies. Especially in our 30th anniversary year, we are honoured to have been asked by Territory governments to organise the meeting, as a result of these years of bringing conservation practitioners together to pool resources and share experiences. We congratulate Alderney for hosting it in a fantastic setting for holding 2 days of discussions. UK and its family of territories should be proud of striving to fulfil their world responsibilities for protecting this uniquely important heritage.’
